How Goldsborough got its name

Long, long ago, there lived a kind, good-hearted man named Godell. There was also a man called Sicul who was nasty and mean. Their village needed a leader. Godell and sicul both applied for the job. There was a competition, it was a years worth of farming. Godell and sicul were both excellent farmers.

Sicul started to get really MAD because Godell was a better farmer than he was. So, Sicul pulled out all the crops in Godell's field and dug up all the seeds and replaced them with WEEDS! When Godell got back to do his farming he was furious! He had to start all over again!

So Godell started all over again. He had to replant all of the seeds, water them and look after them all over again. With only a week left of farming Sicul was determined to win. He started to build a wall to stop Godell from ploughing his field. He put a bunch of things like massive rocks and pebbles in front of Godell's plough too. Something Sicul did not realise was that Godell was in his plough and then it started to go before Sicul had finished building the wall. So the plough got through the wall and Godell ran over Sicul by accident. The village was proud to call Godell their leader after all the nasty and mean things Sicul had done. The sun shone so bright and golden that day so the village was called Goldsborough. 😊

THE END!
