

How Goldstopper got its name beginning

Centuries ago on a beautiful hillside there lived a poor farmer called Bob he had an outstanding farm he had sheep pigs cows horses and chickens.

one day a beautiful eagle got shot by an evil god called orcus. The eagle turned into gold, it fell into a farmers house. The farmer decided to keep the gold he was so greedy he wouldn't share it with anybody. So he locked it up in a safe that nobody would find it anywhere. The evil god sent a rias stole it back. The next day the farmer looked in his safe and he couldn't find it anywhere. They hid it in a secret water fall tunnel nobody could find it at all because there are hieners the hieners guarded the eagle. ✓

2 years ago Bob the farmer lost his golden eagle because orcus stole it. Bob was going to be rich and his family would of been really proud of him. So Bob decided to steel it back so he waits at midnight. He finds it he crashes into his window. As a stener he puts it and across the marters fall. He threw it the hieners were asleep he sneers then gets the golden eagle he sneers back then the marters fall he hears a voice say give me my golden eagle back never orcus. Bob says lets fight the farmer gets the golden eagle. Bob wins the fight he takes the golden eagle. But the rias come they fight and fight and fight and fight and fight and fight there's one rias left the farmer beats

Yesterday the farmer fight over the end good today the farmer is happily sitting at home looking at his shiny golden egg all his family are coming today and bet they will be so happy ding-dad they are here and they so happy and the name of goldsmith the end.
