

A few years ago, there lived two little happy, but poor, girls. Their names were Bella & Ella. Their family owned a little gold mine next to their tiny cottage. They did not have much luck, and had barely found a scrap of gold in many, many years.

Then one starry night a magical God, Khrysos The God of gold, came to Ella and Bella and told them where to find the gold, "There is a hidden layer in the back of the Gold Mine, all you have to do is call my name and you will be happy and rich."

Ella & Bella did as The God said, and within minutes the gold mine exploded with gold, more gold than they could even imagine. Now they had enough gold to live happily forever. They renamed the village Goldsborough and spread their wealth through the people who lived there.

That is the story of how Goldsborough got it's name.
